

SafetyCulture Invests in Kansas City, Opens Headquarters in Crossroads Arts District

Record performance in 2018 sets SafetyCulture on path for continued rapid growth; The company plans to significantly increase local employment over the coming years.

Kansas City, MO. — Dec 11, 2018 — Australian technology company, SafetyCulture, Inc., has cemented its commitment to leverage the North American market from its Kansas City, Missouri North American Headquarters. The company announced today that it moved to a newly refurbished 12,000+ square-foot facility in the Crossroads Arts District.

“We are establishing a modern North American Headquarters for SafetyCulture. It will be a hub for our fast-growing company for years to come,” said Ross Reed, North America President. “Our employees live and work in the Kansas City metropolitan area. By establishing our headquarters here, we are making a tangible commitment to the community and to elevating Kansas City as one of the most important hubs for tech innovation in the United States and the world.”

As SafetyCulture seeks to significantly increase its local workforce over the next several years, its new headquarters will ensure the company is best positioned to continue delivering updates to its industry-leading safety and quality checklist application and the highest quality service to customers.

“It was time for the team to have their own front door. SafetyCulture is making a substantial impact in safety and quality across the globe out of Kansas City and we plan to maintain a strong presence. Our new space will be used to engage our community, host customers, and do the best work of our lives.”

In 2018, SafetyCulture raised Series C Funding of $USD 45 Million, enabling it to pursue its expansion strategy around the globe. The company has nearly tripled in size in the last six months and has no plans of slowing down. SafetyCulture employs more than 320 people across five global offices. The new North American Headquarters has space for 80 employees, with room to expand the workforce as business continues to grow. The company is actively recruiting and hiring. SafetyCulture’s new facility is on the renovated 6th floor of 2114 Central Street.
